Executive Summary

Team 4's presentation outlines a social media strategy designed for president account to enhance the University of Southern California's identity and connection within the Trojan Family community. The vision for this proposal is to connect the various communities at USC driven by leadership, vision, and storytelling, while amplifying USC's excellence in all areas, including education, athletics, research, health, and culture.

The strategy begins with targeting audiences for USC, categorizing them into internal stakeholders (students, faculty, staff, alumni) and external audiences (prospective students, parents, sponsors, and the public). Each outlet has a specific utility—Instagram is meant for visual storytelling, lifestyle promotion, and USC brand identity, while X (formerly Twitter) serves as a means for real-time information sharing, announcements, and a space for public conversation. Engagement performance will be quantitatively calculated with a custom formula, measuring interaction (likes, shares, comments, or follows) compared with total reach or impressions.

The tone and branded message will be tailored to the specific platform. USC's Instagram content should be approachable, authentic, and community driven, while X's content should be formal, informative, and professional to stay consistent with the institution's broader communication practices. The content will be organized into five key categories: Announcements, Recognition & Motivation, Events & Activities, Networking, and Social Engagement and align with content generating formula and word band to guarantee content's timeliness, accuracy, and consistency in tone.

The visual guidelines stress professionalism, consistency, and immersion. It is also suggested to guarantee all images and videos conform to the visual identity of USC. Careful consideration of aspect ratio, clarity, and definition will enhance brand recognition and credibility as well.

Lastly, a content calendar for six months is recommended in relation to significant university events, anniversaries, and campaigns. The specific creative opportunities—with reels series "A Day of the President" and warm-up posts related to LA Olympic 2028 foster a sense of relatability and engagement. All in all, this plan provides a cohesive, data-oriented approach for enhancing USC's posture in digital storytelling, community interaction and institutional pride.
